Hi Laura
It looks like you've received all these emails from Florence Boyd/Lynn Marlow. I will forward the others too.
I'm assuming we will include them as responses on the Plan – we may need to write back to them with the GDPR information for them to be formally recorded.

Evening Simon, Laura and Michael

See email below from John at the Council who advises that the wooded area at the top of Bridle Stiles is considered an informal nature reserve

This adds weight to the land being considered as Green Belt as part of the current local plan consultations

I have also further evidence of the Bridle stiles path in relation to historical data to forward on to you and will do so shortly

Regards

Lyn Marlow

Good morning, Florence

Thank you for your recent email.

The nursery area you mention was a site used by Sheffield City Council as a tree nursery between the 1970's to the early 90's when it ceased operations. Although it stopped being a tree nursery the land still belongs to the council.

The council's Tree & Woodland Team carry out periodic checks to help keep the site safe and the Rangers also help in reducing the build-up of litter and fly tipped material.

The public who walks in the area do so using the casual paths (desire lines) that lead off the Bridle Stile and have remained as they have been for several years.

In addition to this we (T&W) have carried out small scale thinning work in the last 10 years to improve light to the field layer. The area south of the Bridle Stile is enclosed as an informal Nature reserve to help protect it from disturbance.

Hope this helps, if you require any further information, please let me know.

Kind Regards

Evening Simon

Please see below further evidence re Bridle Stiles being of historical significance in 1767

So you can not now say that this land does not have any historical context

Regards

Hi

I asked John about this and this is what he sent me. Linda

Hi Linda. The earliest map evidence I have for the Bridle Stile is the Peter Burdett's Map of Derbyshire (1767) an extract of which I have attached. It shows the Bridle Stile leading from High Lane to Mosborough. The road itself then continues down Hollow Lane to Holbrook and beyond. Hollow Lane is indicative of the ancient nature of this route a former "ho low way". I dont have the 1299 reference mentioned on the sign. This was probably extracted from George Sitwell's book 'The Story of the Sitwells' but I don't have a copy to confirm this. In 1772 the manor in Eckington gave permission to John Rogers to "hang a gate in the Bridle Stile at Howbrooke Lane (Ho brook Lane) as formerly". John.
